FORMS OF MIGRATION: GLOBAL PERSPECTIVES ON IM/MIGRANT ART AND LITERATURE

The international workshop Forms of Migration explores the literary and aesthetic forms of expression that are shaping our understanding and knowledge of the dynamics in and around transnational migration processes. How do aesthetic forms change when people move? What is the creative potential of intercultural encounter? What role do collective and individual identities play in these processes, and how are they reflected in, and created by, forms of expression?

Addressing migration patterns around the globe, the interdisciplinary Forms of Migration workshop places emphasis on form, as an essential constituent of art and literature. This focus is based on the presupposition that it is often the compositional structure and rhetoric of texts and images, the literary nature and formal qualities of certain images and stories that impact readers and beholders, thereby opening up new perspectives on reality. The workshop aims to show that learning about migration and its effects not only through the journalistic lens (in news media or online sources), but also through innovative storytelling or artistic visual material, is a chance to apprehend migration differently, to grasp the complexity of migration processes and to challenge common perceptions of im/migrant experiences. The lectures, readings, panel discussions, and roundtables are accompanied by an art exhibition (including video installations, photographs, drawings, sculptures and collages by Salma Ahmad Caller, Chaza Charafeddine, Reine Chahine, Sophie Ernst, and Ronaldo Lopes de Oliveira), thus highlighting the importance of visual culture in our understanding of im/migrant culture.

The workshop is organised by members of the Arab-German Young Academy of Sciences and Humanities (AGYA) in collaboration with Jennifer A. Reimer (Oregon State University—Cascades). AGYA is supported by the Federal Ministry of Education and Research (BMBF).
